PRESIDENT'S COLUMN

Warm greetings! It is my pleasure and honor to serve as the President of IACCP.

My journey with IACCP began at the 1991 Debrecen conference, which I attended as an MA student alongside my mentor, Cigdem Kagitcibasi. I felt at home when I stepped into IACCP's scholarly environment. During my Ph.D., I had the privilege of working with John Berry, and during my postdoctoral studies, with Rabindra N.Kanungo. These experiences allowed me to rise on the shoulders of giants who profoundly shaped my academic path.

IACCP has been my academic home ever since. Like many adolescents, I went through a phase of rebellion, stepping away for a time as I grappled with concerns about how the Association had evolved over the years. However, this period of reflection eventually led me to an opportunity to take responsibility and contribute to the transformation of IACCP, striving for a better and stronger future for our community.

In this Bulletin article, I would like to share a brief overview of my vision for IACCP and warmly invite you to engage with it. This vision, shaped through conversations with members across all career stages, can be encapsulated by the 3Is: impactful, inspirational, and inclusive. When I say "we", I refer to the collective voice of these members, alongside the invaluable input from the current Executive Committee, whose contributions are reflected in the word cloud below.

Zeynep Aycan
President
Loughborough University, UK

PRESIDENT'S COLUMN

* Impactful

- IACCP can play a pivotal role in bridging the gap between psychological research and real-world applications by fostering translational research that informs practice and policymaking. By translating complex psychological findings into actionable insights, the IACCP could equip practitioners, policymakers, and community leaders with evidence-based tools to address global and local challenges. Whether it's guiding intercultural competence in education, shaping equitable mental health interventions, preventing intercultural conflicts, or influencing policies that promote diversity and inclusion, the IACCP should serve as a hub for culturally informed, interdisciplinary knowledge exchange. Through its global network of scholars and practitioners, the Association must ensure that research is not only scientifically rigorous but also contextually relevant, empowering stakeholders to make informed decisions that benefit communities worldwide.
- Most cross-cultural psychology scholarship focuses on country-level differences in psychological phenomena. Going beyond cross-cultural differences, the IACCP is uniquely positioned to lead research on cross-cultural interfaces/encounters and culture change processes, offering critical insights into the dynamic interactions between cultural groups in an increasingly interconnected world. By exploring how individuals and communities negotiate cultural boundaries, adapt to global influences, and maintain cultural identities, the IACCP can illuminate pathways for fostering harmony and resilience in multicultural contexts. This includes examining acculturation, intercultural competence, and the psychological impacts of globalization, migration, and technological advances. As cultural change processes unfold rapidly in the face of global challenges, such as climate crises and shifting political landscapes, the IACCP's research can provide evidence-based guidance for managing these transitions ethically and inclusively.

* Inspirational

- IACCP can be crucial in inspiring and attracting the next generation of cross-cultural psychologists by fostering an inclusive, dynamic, and reciprocal learning environment. Mentorship from seasoned scholars provides young researchers with invaluable guidance, wisdom, and access to a global network of expertise. However, to remain relevant and forward-thinking, the IACCP must also embrace reverse mentoring, where doctoral researchers and early-career scholars share fresh perspectives, innovative methodologies, and insights into emerging global challenges. By promoting dialogue between generations, the IACCP can create a collaborative ecosystem that values diverse contributions and adapts to the evolving needs of the field. Initiatives such as interactive workshops, cross-generational research projects, and leadership development opportunities can empower young psychologists to see themselves as integral to the future of cross-cultural psychology, ensuring the Association's sustained growth and impact.
- The IACCP has a vital role in advancing research that highlights cross-cultural similarities, emphasizing the shared psychological processes and values that unite humanity. While recognizing and respecting cultural differences is essential, exploring commonalities can foster collaborative models to tackle major global challenges. By shifting some of its focus to what connects us across cultures, the IACCP can contribute to a narrative that balances diversity with unity, promoting collaborative solutions to global challenges. This approach enriches cross-cultural psychology and underscores the potential for collective action in addressing issues like climate change, social justice, and mental health on a global scale. Another recent book I enjoyed reading was by Fathali Moghaddam (2024) where the author explored the concept of omniculturalism and its potential to unite humanity by emphasizing human similarities rather than differences.

* Inclusive

- IACCP must find ways to amplify the number, voice, and influence of members from the majority world—countries often categorized as developing, low-income, or part of the Global South. Historically, our membership base has shown the highest representation from Euro-American regions. By examining IACCP's demographics through an interdisciplinary lens—drawing on the works of Weber, Mills, Foucault, Noelle-Neumann, and Gramsci—we can delve into various concepts of majority, including power majority, perceived majority, silent majority, and cultural majority, and their unique experiences. What is the organizational culture of IACCP, and what does inclusivity truly mean for our association? These are the fresh questions we must explore to better understand our well-established organization.

PRESIDENT'S COLUMN

- We must avoid two common pitfalls in cross-cultural research: (1) equating culture with country (a country is one unit of analysis for culture, but not the unit of analysis), and (2) reducing culture to a single numerical value. Statements like “Country X scored 3.56, while Country Y scored 3.22 on collectivism” illustrate these fallacies. Even when supported by sophisticated statistical methods—such as measurement invariance or item response theory—or large datasets involving many countries, such statements remain problematic. Numbers do not inherently convey the rich, nuanced meanings and lived experiences known only to the participants of our research. Qualitative methods deserve as much respect and appreciation as advanced statistical techniques, such as measurement equivalence, structural equation modeling (SEM), or multilevel analyses. Emerging cross-cultural scholars should be encouraged to adopt mixed-methods approaches, which are essential for capturing the complexity of systems like culture and cross-cultural interactions.
- We also need to better integrate indigenous perspectives into our scholarship to foster a truly global and representative psychological science. Indigenous knowledge systems offer unique insights into human behavior, relationships, and well-being that challenge and enrich mainstream theories. By embracing Indigenous methodologies—such as participatory, relational, and community-based approaches—we honor the epistemologies and lived experiences of diverse cultural groups. For the IACCP, encouraging and representing Indigenous perspectives is not only a matter of equity but also a means of broadening the scope of our research to include voices and wisdom that have historically been marginalized. This integration will strengthen our commitment to cultural diversity, deepen our understanding of global psychological processes, and reinforce the relevance of our work in addressing pressing local and global challenges. Furthermore, we can promote cross-indigenous psychology (Pe-Pua, 2020) that integrates and compares psychological theories, practices, and knowledge from various indigenous cultures to understand human behavior and mental processes through the lens of multiple indigenous perspectives, acknowledging the unique contexts, values, and beliefs that shape these experiences. An excellent example of this effort is Anand Paranjpe’s most recent book (2023) I read on Yoga Psychology, where the author tackled a highly complex knowledge system and connected it to mainstream Psychology theories.

The future of IACCP is ours to shape. Let us work together to build an Association that is impactful, inspiring, and inclusive. By fostering research that addresses real-world challenges, inspiring the next generation of cross-cultural psychologists, and embracing diverse voices and perspectives, we can ensure that IACCP continues to thrive as a global leader. Together, we can shape an IACCP that not only advances knowledge but also brings us closer as a community—one that truly reflects the richness and complexity of the world we study.

Remembering Josephine Naidoo

Memories of Dr. Josephine (Josie) Cecilia Naidoo

William Gabrenya, Past-President

How does one truly encapsulate the lives of people who, upon passing, leave behind so much good? I first met Josie in 1994 as she stepped up to assume the crucial position of Secretary-General when the elected incumbent was suddenly unable to continue. During her two-year term, we worked closely together as we developed new communication functions for the Association, such as the website and the new magazine-style Bulletin. I look back, fondly, as I recall what an absolute pleasure it was to work with Josie. She was warm and conscientious, with unfaltering sincerity.

Though our professional roles changed, we kept in touch over the ensuing decades. In 2019, she wrote a beautiful article for the Bulletin about her research with the Inuit community of Canada. You can see it here: <https://www.iaccp.org/wp-content/uploads/2019/04/web0781-2.pdf>

As the years passed, she was often accompanied to IACCP conferences by her son, Dr. Kenneth Leslie. The last time I saw Josie and Ken was at the 2018 Guelph, Canada Congress. I was conducting interviews with some of the IACCP founders, and despite her declining health, she agreed to be interviewed. It was a bittersweet encounter, knowing it would probably be our last.

Several formal obituaries of Josie have been published, including:

Rather than write another obituary, I will let her speak for herself. Click on the link to see my 25-minute edited interview with her on the Association YouTube channel. Ken kindly provided additional still images for the video and helped me improve the video given his detailed knowledge of video production.

BRIDGING INTERCULTURAL DIVIDES IN A DIGITALLY INTERCONNECTED WORLD

AN IAIR AND IACCP JOINT CONFERENCE

28 JUNE - 1 JULY 2025

We welcome everyone to join us in this exciting and novel collaboration between IAIR AND IACCP – the first ever joint conference! In this initiative we aim to bring people together from all around the globe and across disciplines for a connected and empowering experience celebrating all things intercultural and cross-cultural in Brisbane at the heart of the Sunshine State of Australia.

Keynote Speakers

We are pleased to reveal the Keynote speakers for the IAIR/IACCP 2025 Joint Conference!

Professor Pat Dudgeon

University of Western Australia Profile

Pat Dudgeon is from the Bardi people in Western Australia. She is a psychologist and professor at the Poche Centre for Aboriginal Health and the School of Indigenous Studies at UWA. Her area of research includes Indigenous social and emotional wellbeing and suicide prevention.

Professor Dudgeon is the director of the Centre of Best Practice in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Suicide Prevention at UWA. She is also the lead chief investigator of a national research project, Transforming Indigenous Mental Health and Wellbeing that aims to develop approaches to Indigenous mental health services that promote cultural values and strengths as well as empowering users. She is a board member of Gayaa Dhuwi (Proud Spirit) Australia, and a prominent contributor to the Australian Indigenous Psychologists Association. She was a Commissioner with the National Mental Health Commission and also was the co-chair of the National Ministerial Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Mental Health and Suicide Prevention Advisory Group where significant policies had been developed to improve the mental health and wellbeing of Indigenous Australians. She is a current member of Advisory Group to the National Office of Suicide Prevention.

Professor Dudgeon has many publications in Indigenous mental health, in particular, the Working Together Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Mental Health and Wellbeing Principals and Practice 2014. Also of note, is the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Suicide Prevention Evaluation Project (ATSISPEP). This ground-breaking evaluation clearly identified the key elements for best practice suicide prevention programs and strategies, and the central importance of Indigenous leadership at all levels of delivery.

Professor Dudgeon was appointed a member (AM) in the General Division of the Order of Australia in 2023.

BRIDGING INTERCULTURAL DIVIDES IN A DIGITALLY INTERCONNECTED WORLD

AN IAIR AND IACCP JOINT CONFERENCE

28 JUNE - 1 JULY 2025

Professor Mohan J Dutta Massey University Profile

Mohan J Dutta is Dean's Chair Professor of Communication. He is the Director of the Center for Culture-Centered Approach to Research and Evaluation (CARE) at Massey University. developing culturally-centered, community-based projects of social change, advocacy, and activism that articulate health as a human right. Mohan Dutta's research examines the role of advocacy and activism in challenging marginalizing structures, the relationship between poverty and health, political economy of global health policies, the mobilization of cultural tropes for the justification of neo-colonial health development projects, and the ways in which participatory culture-centered processes and strategies of radical democracy serve as axes of global social change.

Professor Matthew Hornsey UQ Profile

Matthew has published over 200 papers, mostly on how to create change in trust-sensitive, polarised environments. He has conducted cross-national and cross-cultural research on topics such as climate scepticism, vaccine hesitancy, conspiracy theorising, and misinformation about renewable energy.

Matthew is currently leading the Net Zero Observatory at the University of Queensland, a multi-disciplinary group of academics and practitioners who design strategies to accelerate industry action and community support for rapid decarbonisation globally. His most recent research focuses on the capacity of Gen-AI tools such as ChatGPT to reduce misinformation and conspiracy theories about climate mitigation efforts.

AN IAIR AND IACCP JOINT CONFERENCE

28 JUNE - 1 JULY 2025

Registration

The conference offers a range of registration options including rates for members, students, and to make conference access as equitable as possible, reduced registration costs for those residing in low, lower middle, upper middle-income economies. Day registrations are also offered, however, must be paid in advance at the time of registration, since there is no facility to pay on the day.

- To receive members rates you must be a current member of either IAIR or IACCP and show evidence of such. You can sign up for membership at each organisation's websites.
- Reduced rates for those currently living in a non-high-income country follow the World Bank classification.
- Student rates apply to current students studying at an educational institute. Students from a non-high-income country or currently residing in a non-high-income country are also eligible for an additional reduced rate.
- To receive the early bird registration rate, registrants must register and pay in full by Midnight AEST Monday 3 March 2025.

Full Registration Inclusions

- Access to all Congress sessions
- Daily Catering: Morning Tea, Lunch, Afternoon Tea
- One ticket to the Welcome Reception (please confirm your attendance upon registering)
- One Conference Dinner Ticket Reception (please confirm your attendance upon registering)

Regional Conference Travel Support Application

IACCP offers travel assistance to IACCP members (current, renewing, and new) to facilitate their attendance at the upcoming Regional Conference; the next one in 2025 is in Brisbane. This Award is meant to, in particular, support members from the particular region that would otherwise not be represented at the conference.

The application deadline is March 1, 2025, and the application form can be found through this link here

Who can apply?

Current or renewing members of IACCP can apply for this Award. One of the aims of this fund is to enlarge the membership base of the Association. Hence, conference participants who are not yet members of IACCP are encouraged to become members and apply for this Award.

What is covered?

The Award covers the costs of

- (1) membership dues for one year and
- (2) the conference/congress registration fee (which includes the conference dinner).

For in-person conferences, travel-related expenses, and accommodations up to a limit of 1000 USD. These costs will be reimbursed upon submission of receipts to the Treasurer. If necessary, an advance (i.e., earlier payment to the awardee to cover costs) will be provided upon request.

For virtual attendees in virtual/hybrid conferences, no additional support is provided (beyond membership dues and the conference/congress fee).

IACCP SPARK GRANT

IGNITING GLOBAL INTEREST IN CROSS-CULTURAL PSYCHOLOGY

IACCP invites applications for the SPARK Grants 2025.

The SPARK grants are aimed at supporting activities that will enhance the visibility of the IACCP and cross-cultural psychology.

More specifically, the grants aim to:

- spark awareness and interest in cross-cultural psychology (among academics, practitioners, the community).
- build local capacity and access to resources for conducting cross-cultural
- research.
- spark networking among cross-cultural psychologists across or within regions

We invite and look forward to receiving applications from around the world!

Read more about SPARK by clicking here.

As the educational wing of IACCP, the E.D.U.C.A.T.E. Initiative exists to support the development of educational opportunities and resources for IACCP members at all career stages.

E.D.U.C.A.T.E. is comprised of a committee of IACCP members that organizes and coordinates a series of dynamic activities and opportunities, including regular forums for knowledge exchange and networking, webinar series about highly relevant topics in Cross-Cultural Psychology, the Culture & Psychology School, and Kwok Leung Awards.

JANUARY 2025 EVENTS

INAUGURAL FORUM

On January 16th, E.D.U.C.A.T.E. held its first online Forum. The meeting featured the founding members of the committee - E.D.U.C.A.T.E. Director, Prof. Saba Safdar, Elena Piccinelli [Ph.D. Candidate], Dr. Rebekah Pollock, and Dr. Ronja Runge - as well as IACCP President, Prof. Zeynep Aycan and Past President, Prof. William K. Gabrenya. The event included a Graduate Student and Early Career Research Colloquium, with presentations from Marta Żegleń (University of Warsaw) and Marie Kollek (University of Hildesheim), and a Networking Café, where participants were invited to join informal discussions around cross-cutting topics in the field.

E.D.U.C.A.T.E.

WEBINAR SERIES "UNVEILING THE SELF: PERSPECTIVES ON THE MENA REGION"

Starting on January 24th, this series of four webinars explores the conceptualizations of "Self" in the Middle East and North Africa. With a highly dynamic format, each webinar includes a 45-minute presentation and a 75-minute discussion with experts in the field. Webinars are recorded and available on-demand for all registered participants. Participants who wish to register after January 24th will have access to the registration of the first Webinar. More information about fees, dates, and times, can be found on the IACCP webpage.

MENTORING PROGRAM

This program aims to connect IACCP members across various career stages and levels of expertise. E.D.U.C.A.T.E. is seeking mentors eager to advise others and mentees seeking support on various potential aspects of their research and career planning. To ensure a meaningful mentorship experience for both parties, we will strive to match mentors and mentees based on multiple relevant factors.

To participate in the program, fill in the form on the E.D.U.C.A.T.E. webpage www.iaccp.org/the-e-d-u-c-a-t-e-i initiative/ or e-mail us at educate.iaccp@gmail.com

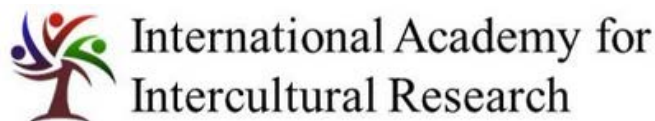

E.D.U.C.A.T.E. SEEKS MEMBERS TO INTEGRATE ITS COMMITTEE

- Communications Manager (term: 2025–2030). Main duties: maintaining the Initiative's email and mailing list, managing online platforms (e.g., Zoom) during forums and webinars, and announcements for the IACCP website, Bulletin, and social media accounts.
- Assistant to Communications Manager (student position; term: 2025–2026). Main duties: assisting the Communication Manager in preparing content for the IACCP Website, and managing e-mails, communications, newsletters, and social media.
- Chair of the Teaching & Practice Sub-Committee (term: 2025–2030). Main duties: coordination of a sub-committee aimed at providing educational resources for widespread accessibility among IACCP members. Teaching & Practice Sub-Committee Members (3 positions; term: 2025–2029). Main duties: regular engagement in activities related to the collection and systematization of educational resources.

Pre-Conference Training June 26th–27th, 2025

Call for Instructors!

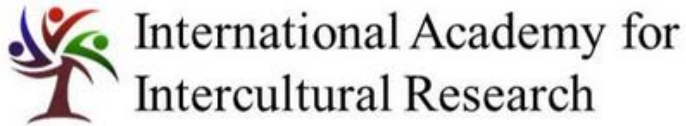

Overview

The pre-conference training, sponsored by the International Academy for Intercultural Research (IAIR) and the International Association for Cross-Cultural Psychology (IACCP), is open to PhD and Master level students who are interested in the intersection of culture and psychology.

The pre-conference training provides a research-intensive and interactive experience for participants from various universities to learn from one another and to receive specialized training from experts in different fields that incorporate culture in their study of psychology.

The pre-conference training precedes the IAIR & IACCP joint conference, June 28th – July 1st 2025 in Brisbane, Australia. <https://www.intercultural-academy.net/iair-iaccp2025>

IAIR & IACCP pre-conference training focuses on community engaged scholarship and supports the development of broad research skills, international collaborations, effective grant proposal writing, and preparation of scholarly manuscripts. Our goal is to stimulate networking and interactions with peers and instructors in a safe and productive environment. We also aim to emphasize the importance of the applied character of research and the necessity of interdisciplinary collaboration.

The program

Students will be able to choose two content streams from potentially 3 streams. Please note that all streams will be in-person. Instructors are asked to prepare 1 day (8 hours) of content that will have to be taught twice.

Instructors are encouraged to submit proposals to the following stream area. Please note these are some examples of the streams that the Organizing Committee has developed (modifications are welcomed).

Stream 1: Methodological and Research Design

Focus A: Quantitative Approaches

- Core principles for ensuring validity and reliability in comparative research, including sampling strategies and measurement equivalence.
- Techniques for addressing cultural bias, back-translation methods, and adapting instruments for cross-cultural contexts.

Focus B: Qualitative Approaches

- Thematic analysis, narrative inquiry, ethnography, and discourse analysis with applications to intercultural contexts.
- Digital ethnography and the role of researcher identity, positionality, and power dynamics in cross-cultural research.

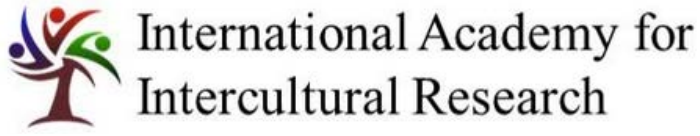

Focus A: Systems Thinking and Participatory Methods

- The interconnectedness of cultural, social, and ecological systems as a foundation for more holistic approaches to understanding intercultural dynamics.
- Examining intercultural issues through participatory methods that enhance community voices and lived experiences.

Focus B: Open Science and Meta-Research

- Strategies to improve reproducibility and apply open science principles (e.g., pre-registration, data sharing, and open-access publishing) in cross-cultural research.
- Meta-scientific methods such as systematic reviews and meta-analysis.

Stream 2: Rethinking Research and Meta-Science

Stream 3: Skills Development Workshops

Focus A: Grant Writing and Career Pathways

- Competitive proposals for cross-cultural and intercultural research funding.
- Pathways for PhD students in academia, industry, NGOs, and policymaking with a focus on cross-cultural applications.

Focus B: Writing, Ethics, and Synthesis

- Develop skills for writing for non-academic audiences, such as blogs, opinion pieces, or public reports.
- Techniques for combining findings from different cultures using meta-analysis and systematic reviews, including addressing challenges in cultural variability.

Timeline: February 20th, 2025 – Deadline for Instructor applications

Benefits: Instructors will receive compensation: $400 USD payment, plus two days of accommodation, breakfast, and lunch.

Application and further info: To apply, please submit a cover letter outlining your chosen 1-day course, your motivation for wanting to be part of the pre-conference training, along with your curriculum vitae (CV). Send these documents to: cultureandpsychologyschool2020@gmail.com

Enjoy JCCP as a Paperless Digital Journal!

We are pleased to announce that the Journal of Cross-Cultural Psychology (JCCP) is available exclusively in digital format for our members.

The Journal is just a click away (see below):

This reflects an increasing trend in the publishing world and among scientific associations like IACCP to promote environmental and financial sustainability.

Prestigious journals from APA, APS, and BPS now provide digital-only copies (e.g., Psychological Methods, Journal of Experimental Psychology: General, Journal of Applied Psychology, Developmental Psychology, Psychological Review, Psychological Science, and the 11 journals of the British Psychological Society).

Below are some key advantages of moving to a paperless, online journal:

- Significant savings for IACCP: Under our current contract negotiations with Sage Inc. (the publisher of JCCP), the cost of providing a printed version of the journal is quoted at $40 per member. Continuing to offer printed copies would place a strain on our already limited budget.
- Environmental responsibility: Going paperless is a step toward a more environmentally sustainable practice for IACCP. More about the climate responsibility of scholarly publishing in this article.
- Enhanced features: The online format offers benefits that print cannot, such as EarlyView papers, virtual special issues, supplementary content, hyperlinked references, and more.
- Space-saving: Printed journals not only take time to arrive but also occupy significant space in our libraries—not to mention the dust they collect. With the online version, members can still print selected articles, annotate them, and store them in their personal files.
- Improved accessibility: The digital format provides better accessibility for visually impaired readers through zoom functionality and easy navigation.
- Stay updated: Readers can register for email alerts for the table of contents, ensuring they stay up-to-date with newly published issues.
- Access when you travel: Readers can access the Journal via their smartphones when they travel for conferences, work, or pleasure.
